I saw Armor Express has a Helmet Carrier Bag. It would appear to be acceptable to hold a helmet and gas mask (let me know if I'm wrong since it shows no dimensions). For the ballistic helmet I think the Armor Express AEX35 would do the trick.

12-bags
3-ballistic helmets in black.

they took 6 weeks to get here. The helmets are a possibility but no guarantee.

They use Sirchie brand riot helmets. Non-ballistic with a face shield. The helmets are sized in Universal ( 6 1/2"- 7 5/8") and XL (7 3/4"-8 1/8"). Price is $139 a piece. I wore one of these "back in the day" and they did the job. The size options would fit most people. Only a few would need an XL.

There is no stock on site and everything is ordered.

Can you price out 12 gas masks and frag/bump/non-ballistic helmets of whatever sizes you think are necessary? I need a price and an ETA on delivery date. If the delivery date is before November 3, get with me and Cassie on the fly and let's see if we can have them in hand before the election. We will need to sort of CPF and payment in short order.

If they can't be delivered before November 3, we can slow down and discuss purchasing of fleet helmets and masks. Gas masks are not on VERF. Helmets come due in 2023.

Ok, let's slow our roll and think long-term for a reasonable strategic stockpile of masks and bump helmets with face shields. Based on my rough calculations, we will have to do advertising and written bids. If it was before election we could bypass purchasing regulations based on exigency.

Good morning,

I'm looking into pricing for new AVON PC50 Masks with CTCF50 filters. We need 8 for sure but depending on prices may get additional. I got your contact information from calling customer service a few weeks ago about information on our old 2003 masks.

Thank you,

Given their lack of usage over the past 20 years i think its a waste of money but if you feel that patrol should have access to helmets then by all means. My main priority is to update the masks for METRO operators at this point. They are the ones who will use these pieces of equipment. If you still want to push to get some sort of ballistic helmets for patrol after that it couldn't hurt but like i said its not a priority nor do i believe its a wise choice to spend money on. Just my thoughts on the issue.

Good morning,

I'm looking into pricing for new AVON PC50 Masks with CTCF50 filters. We need 8 for sure but depending on prices may get additional. I got your contact information from calling customer service a few weeks ago about information on our old 2003 masks.

Thank you,

This is going to be a longer answer than what you were looking for, but I think I need to give you the full story that I found out about these helmets. I started to see some things that concerned me so I did some research. I'll try to keep it to the Cliff's Notes version. The helmets are sold by CPG Armor and I'm not sure who we purchased them from but I suspect it was directly from them, as I can't really find any other dealers that carry them. I think we paid somewhere in the $350 range for them at the time. They were listed at a much higher price but had some big discount that was going on and as it turns out, the discount was actually their normal price until recently. When I started researching, I found out that these, along with several other brands in the same price range, all had several things in common. They were all produced in China, shipped over here, and sold as American made.

From the testing I found, they did all technically perform to the NIJ standards that they advertised, and would stop all threats listed in those standards. Here's the catch and the reason they were so much cheaper than other brands of helmets. All helmets sold to the military must also comply with DOT&E Backface Deformation Standards (25.4mm front and back impact and 16mm side impact). At the time, I don't believe these helmets complied with that standard and there was some testing out there showing that the backface deformation was pretty bad when compared to other higher end helmets. They now show on their website that they do comply with those standards, but the price of the helmet is now $715. In addition to that, we found that the rails on the sides of them were slightly out of spec and allowed the comms adaptors to pop off pretty easily, so we replaced those for about $80 each. During some of the discussions I saw about their helmets, the company owner made an appearance [REDACTED].

I've attached the link to their site, but it looks like they're completely out of stock anyway. There are several other companies that all have the same story for cheap helmets, like Hard Head Veterans. Just wanted to you to have all of the information before buying any more of them.

Good morning,

I'm looking into pricing for new AVON PC50
Masks with CTCF50 filters. We need 8 for sure but depending on prices may get additional. I got your contact information from calling customer service a few weeks ago about information on our old 2003 masks.

Thank you,

I'll ask Benoit on the helmets and see where his folks just got them. As far as amount, I'd say enough to cover a shift or team so 10-12. I hate spending the money on those but it's your call.

We completed the fit testing for the masks and for the most part they failed to pass the machines test for whatever reason. [REDACTED]. Since we purchased those masks and handed out fragmentation military helmets, [REDACTED] has come on line. What that means is that the need for patrol officers to mobilize to form a skirmish line to hold back protesters is essentially a thing of the past. With the availability of [REDACTED] and [REDACTED], the department has opted not to replace the department issues gas masks and helmets. So, the gas masks, helmets and green bags are yours to do with what you want. You are no longer required to keep them in your locker or here at post. If you don't want them please throw them in north storage and we will dispose of them. Do not leave them in the corners of the locker rooms or any other common area. We will collect them from north storage April 7 to be disposed of.

Can you price out 12 gas masks and frag/bump/non-ballistic helmets of whatever sizes you think are necessary? I need a price and an ETA on delivery date. If the delivery date is before November 3, get with me and Cassie on the fly and let's see if we can have them in hand before the election. We will need to sort of CPF and payment in short order.

If they can't be delivered before November 3, we can slow down and discuss purchasing of fleet helmets and masks. Gas masks are not on VEF. Helmets come due in 2023.

Ok, let's slow our roll and think long-term for a reasonable strategic stockpile of masks and bump helmets with face shields. Based on my rough calculations, we will have to do advertising and written bids. If it was before election we could bypass purchasing regulations based on exigency.
